Santos Launches Support Centre EMPLOYER NEWS

Santos is pleased to announce the establishment of its new Global Support Centre in PNG, providing a new avenue for leveraging local talent and promoting them worldwide.

The PNG Global Support Centre was officially launched by Prime Minister James Marape, in Port Moresby this week.

The Centre will operate as a hub for providing critical support services to Santos' worldwide operations, using a local, highly-skilled workforce.

In his keynote address, Prime Minister Marape acknowledged Santos for being a consistent corporate citizen in PNG and for adapting to a call to add value in its core business through investment in human resources.

“We do acknowledge the global outreach Santos has in respect to mobilising not just capital and resources for projects in PNG but more importantly, mobilising opportunities for the Human Resources that work within us,” Prime Minister Marape said.

Santos Executive Vice President of Eastern Australia and Papua New Guinea Brett Darley, welcomed and thanked the Prime Minister for his presence in witnessing and officiating at this historical milestone for the Santos workforce in PNG as the company continues to fulfil its strategic intent to help position PNG for future growth opportunities.

“Our intent is that this Global Support Centre will be a catalyst for employment opportunities, harnessing the potential of local talent and creating pathways for skills and leadership development for our workforce into the future,” Mr Darley said.

Mr Darley said the launch of the Global Support Centre is testament to Santos’ long-standing partnership with PNG and its dedication to supporting the country’s economic growth as the company remains committed to investing in PNG and fostering a mutually beneficial relationship for years to come.

Santos Country Chair PNG Leon Buskens said the PNG Global Support Centre initiative and the new roles that come with it will support the broader Eastern Australia and PNG asset portfolio resulting in “in-sourcing” of engineering and maintenance activity as the initial phase.

“This initiative is consistent with our commitment to grow local employment in PNG and complements the PNG Government’s aspirations found in its National Content Policy framework,” Mr Buskens said.

The PNG Global Support Centre aims to increase employment and use local talent to generate opportunities consequently, achieving the company’s ultimate objective which is to shape a brighter future for PNG, filled with opportunity, economic prosperity, and technological superiority.

The primary phase of this project will focus on enhancing PNG’s maintenance and engineering services. The Global Support Centre project was a multi-year initiative, and the (Centre’s) tag line “One World, One Team” signifies that though Santos operates in different regions in the world, every individual belongs to one world and is part of the one Santos team.

The PNG Global Support Centre will operate initially through a team of six national professionals who will be stationed in Port Moresby, with plans to expand to Santos’ Australian operations by July 2024.

As the initiative gains momentum, more national employees will take up roles in the Centre.
